Customizing MailSite ExpressPro

The MailSite ExpressPro webmail in MailSite 11 can be customized for your site from the MailSite Console, with no files to edit. This is useful for:

- Personalizing the sign-in page with information and logos that are specific to your site
- Choosing the colors and theme people see
- Naming your website, for example after your own mail service

USEFUL TOOLS

Everything is set in one dialog. In the Console, select Server and click the Customization icon. A preview on the right shows the sign-in page as you change it, on a computer or a phone, and as ExpressPro's sign-in or the Console's own. You can try out how your changes will look before you click Apply.

MAILSITE EXPRESSPRO FILES

MailSite 11 has no ExpressPro folder of page templates, style sheets and images to edit. The MailSite HTTP service serves ExpressPro itself, and your choices are saved with the server's settings. You don't need to take a copy before you begin: Reset to default puts back the stock page at any time.

The Customization dialog has two tabs:

- Website: the website name, such as MochaMail. Browser tabs show it before the page name, for example "MochaMail | Inbox". Left empty, tabs show "ExpressPro".
- Sign-in page: how the page where people sign in looks.

THE SIGN-IN PAGE

Often companies only wish to customize the first screen their customers see. The same look is used for ExpressPro, the web Console and the page Outlook shows when it signs in with modern authentication (OAuth).

Changing the Images

Add your company logo in place of the standard one. With a logo, the sign-in box leaves out its own mail icon. You can also untick the heading and other texts, for a logo that already says it all.

Changing the Sign-in Box

Choose a layout: Card (the sign-in box over the background), Split screen or Side panel, and use the small grid to place the box. On phones the box is always centered. Give the box its own colors if you like, and write its title, its text and a short welcome message.

GRAPHICS

Sign-in Images

Setting	Effect
Logo	Your own logo, above the sign-in box or in it
Background	The theme's own, a solid color or a picture (PNG, JPEG or WebP) that fills the page, shows whole or repeats, and can be darkened so the text stays readable
Tab icon	The small picture browsers show on the tab and in bookmarks, for ExpressPro and the Console: an ICO file, or a square PNG, JPEG or WebP picture of up to 256 KB

THEMES AND COLORS

In MailSite 11, colors come from themes instead of style sheets. The theme you choose for the sign-in page is also the theme of every user who has not picked one in their own Settings. A user's own choice always wins.

Setting	Effect
Theme	A built-in theme, or Match each device to follow each device's light or dark setting
My own colours	Your own theme: start from a theme, then choose its background, panel, text, line, and button and link colors
Button colour	Replaces the theme's color for buttons and links; the words on the button turn white or dark, whichever reads
Sign-in box colours	Gives the sign-in box its own color, for example a light box for a dark logo on a dark theme

Texts and Links

Setting	Effect
Heading and welcome	A heading (ExpressPro when left empty) and a short welcome message
Footer	A closing line, for example where to get help, with links written as HTML
Show the version number	Untick to leave out the version line at the bottom of the page
Offer the Console in ExpressPro	Turn off when the people who sign in are mail users only, such as the customers of a hosting service

SUPPORT

Customizations are made only through the Customization dialog, so every site stays on supported pages. If a change doesn't look right, Reset to default puts back the stock page.
